The Institute of International Monetary Research is a registered charity.

We rely on donations to provide funds to enable us to continue our research agenda. The purpose of the Institute of International Monetary Research is to demonstrate and bring to public attention the strong relationship between the quantity of money on the one hand, and the levels of national income and expenditure on the other.

It doesn't matter as to the value of your gift, but the giving of your gift does matter to us.

Professional Courses

Professional Courses

We provide professional training courses on Money and Central Banking, which can be tailored to your organisation.

The courses are taught by professionals and academics with many years of experience at a very high policy level, including advisors to Parliaments and Central Banks in different jurisdictions.

The instructors include: Tim Congdon (Chairman, IIMR), Geoffrey Wood (University of Buckingham) and Forrest Capie (Cass Business School).

We can provide specialised teaching on particular countries' economies, both developed and emerging. The structure of the courses include 3-4 hours of seminar sessions in the morning and discussion sessions in the afternoon, where the attendees will be discussing case studies related to their economies.

Some of the topics we cover:

- ❖ Monetary policy and development
- ❖ Central bank communication to the public
- ❖ Central bank independence
- ❖ Monetary policy and financial stability – central bank policies in a banking crisis
- ❖ Money, inflation and nominal income
- ❖ Bank regulation and supervision

The courses are run at the Institute's premises at the University of Buckingham and can include accommodation and catering on campus, or alternatively they can be delivered at your organisation. The courses can be run over 2-10 days, depending upon your requirements and the topic of the course.

They include a visit to the relevant institutions on the field, such as the Bank of England (with a talk on its functions and monetary strategy) or the London Stock Exchange (with specialised training sessions at the premises)*.

*The visits are subject to availability of places and dates.
